Michael Wade is Professor of Kinesiology and a faculty member in the University of Minnesota Center for Cognitive Science. He is an internationally recognized scholar who has published extensively in two areas: movement science: Developmental change across the lifespan, with an emphasis on individuals with motor difficulties, and on the effects of aging on motor skill performance. Dr. Wade holds Fellow status in the National Academy of Kinesiology; the American Academy of Mental Retardation; and the Research Consortium of the American Association of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance. He is a past president of the North American Society for the Psychology of Sport and Physical Activity -1987, (NASPSPA), and is a recipient of both the Distinguished Scholar Award, and the Presidents Distinguished Service from NASPSPA.

Research statement

My graduate students and I are especially interested in how motor skills develop across the lifespan, but especially in children, both typically developing, and those diagnosed with both intellectual and motor challenges. This includes children at risk for Developmental Coordination Disorder (DCD); those classified with Intellectual and Disabilities; and those diagnosed with Autistic Spectrum Disorder (ASD). Our research extends also to the elderly, especially those who present with mild cognitive impairment (MCI) and those diagnosed with advanced dementia.

Our current research investigates children who are developing normally from a cognitive perspective but who appear to be ‘clumsy.’ and may be at risk for DCD. At the other end of the lifespan we have been investigating changes in postural development of individuals as they age. Here the focus is on trying to evaluate and understand how perceptual information might cause problems with postural control that can lead to falls in the elderly, a major public health hazard. My interest in Human Factors includes human operator performance such as driving performance of the elderly; change in driving habits (i.e. the effects of dementia and onset of Alzheimer’s disease) that often can lead to an increase in accidents. The human factors aspects of driver performance focus on such things as reaction time, changes in the visual perceptual field, (peripheral vision), changes in “field of view” of older drivers when monitoring the driving environment, especially when navigating in heavy traffic and making turns against oncoming traffic. The central challenge of all of this work is to better understand whether developmental changes in both our ability to utilize perceptual information (detection problem) and whether that perceptual information is used efficiently and quickly in coordinating and controlling skilled activity in the context of a specific environmental milieu.
